Tasos Kostopoulos studied Law at the University of Athens and obtained his Ph.D. in Modern History at the University of the Aegean, on a doctoral thesis entitled “National Parties and early Macedonism. The Social and Political Dimension of National Strife in late Ottoman Macedonia” (published in 2022). A journalist by profession for almost four decades, he is currently working in the Institute for Mediterranean Studies, as Principal Investigator of the ERC-funded program MACAUTH. Screening Souls, Building Nations. Macedonia(s) as a Laboratory for Balkan-wide Authoritarianism. He has published seven books on history, all of them in Greek, 40 scientific articles or book chapters in Greek, English or French, and has participated in 64 scientific conferences and workshops in Greece, Germany, France, Italy, Switzerland, the Czech Republic, Bulgaria, North Macedonia, Serbia, Turkey, Lebanon, the USA and Japan. His books include The Prohibited Language. State Repression of Slavic Dialects in Greek Macedonia [2000]; Self-Censored Memory. WWII Security Battalions and Post-War “National Correctness” [2005]; War and Ethnic Cleansing, 1912-1922 [2007], and Red December. On the Question of Revolutionary Violence [2016]). His interests evolve around the question of nationalism as a socio-political project, social movements and conflicts, minority assimilation and ethnic cleansing, political violence and “deep state” politics.
